

What is Patent Box?

Businesses that invest in developing and exploiting intellectual property should be rewarded and Patent Box is designed to do exactly that.

This scheme is administered by HMRC and is designed to reward innovative UK companies that develop and exploit patented inventions. The tax on profits from the exploitation of patented inventions is reduced to 10%.

Even if the patented element of the product or process is minor, 100% of a company's worldwide profits arising from product income should qualify for the 10% Patent Box corporation tax relief.

Is it relevant to your business?

To benefit you need to be a UK limited company paying UK corporation tax. You need to have developed an innovative product or process, filed a patent application, and generated profits relating to the patented invention.

The innovation does not have to be rocket science to be patentable. Most patented inventions are just small technical improvements on existing products or processes.

Many companies don't think that their intellectual property (IP) is patentable, or they think that the patenting process is too expensive and takes too long to be worthwhile.

The Patent Box has been specifically designed to overcome these misconceptions and the tax relief potentially covers the costs.

What can we do for you?

We support our clients to actively identify, value, manage, and exploit their IP. We can identify opportunities for patent applications and claiming a Patent Box corporation tax saving. Our work is in itself a valuable audit of your intangible IP assets. Whatever your business, your product and process IP could be significant and can be one of the most valuable assets your business owns.

We can manage your Patent Box election and claim from start to finish, which includes dealing with any HMRC queries along the way.

We can also undertake a programme of patent extension work, where we aim to extend the life and size of return from the Patent Box legislation.
